REPORT

Department of Political Science series on "An Introduction to Important Laws" in collaboration with college Internal Quality Assurance Cell. 30th December, 2021, Dr. Manisha Surase, Assistant Professor Department of Economics, delivered lecture on 'Protection of Women against Domestic Violence Act-2005'.

Prof. Rahul Pardeshi, Assistant Professor, Department of Political Science, presented the introductory remark in which he talked about the usefulness of such lectures in sensitizing students to important laws.

Dr. Manisha Surase said that domestic violence has been a major concern in India. By referring to research report, she said that about 30% women experience some kind of domestic violence and this is an alarming situation. She further said that 4% pregnant women experience spousal violence during the pregnancy. Violence on account of dowry is yet another concern. She said that the Act provide women for more effective protection from of violence of any kind occurring within the family and in other domains of life. She said that the act identifies domestic violence as physical abuse, sexual abuse, verbal and emotional, economic abuse.

She said that the act is very responsive in providing temporary and emergency relief to the victims. In case the protection order or Magistrate's order is violated, the criminal law starts. The aggrieved person is liable to get shelter home. Having obtained relief under the law, a victim can still go for relief under other laws later. Domestic Incident Reports is an important aspect of this law as it serve as important records in the evidence taking process.
